BUND CHIEF DODGES HIS TIPSY TRIAL

SOUTHBRIDGE, July 17 — Fritz Kuhn, "Little Fuehrer" of the German-American bund, failed to appear in district court here today to face charges of drunkenness and profanity.

Faces New Arrest

Nazidom's No. 1 propagandist in the United States apparently wished his dignity to suffer no further affronts such as those experienced when he was arrested and ignominiously thrown into a police cell at Webster early yesterday.

At any event, Kuhn gave the snub direct today to Southbridge court, the Webster police and the hundred or more would-be spectators who thronged the court house here, awaiting his arraignment.

CUSSED IN 2 TONGUES

Among those who were obviously disappointed by the burly bund leader's non-appearance was Patrolman Henry Plasse of Webster, the motorcycle officer who hauled Kuhn into the cell after being allegedly "cussed out" in two languages by the "Little Fuehrer."

At the time of the arrest, it was Officer Plasse's contention that Kuhn and his party had dined not wisely but too well in a Webster cafe.

The party was over-boisterous, Plasse said, and he refused to let Kuhn's supposed chauffeur drive an automobile.

One word led to another, with Kuhn insisting "You can't do this to me" and finally exploding in a burst of German and American profanity, according to police.

THREATS IRK OFFICER

Threats the stalwart "Little Fuehrer" allegedly made to Officer Plasse were still irking the Webster patrolman today, and Plasse's friends were looking forward to the courtroom meeting.

A former middleweight professional boxer, who fought under the ring name of "Buck Crouse" and who met rough and tumble pugilists such as "Pal" Reed and Boston's "Hambone" Kelley, Patrolman Plasse exercised commendable discretion and patience in his encounter with Kuhn yesterday, Plasse's friends pointed out.

But they and the court and the public at large were all denied sight of Bund-Fuehrer Kuhn today.

Judge Louis O. Rieutord delayed calling Kuhn's case until routine

SAVED FROM SEA—Tenderly, Coastguards carry Russell D. Hayes, injured crew member of ill-fated mercy plane V-164, to shore after dramatic rescue 150 miles at sea.

Hunt Mercy Plane Wreckage, Tomb for Three in Atlantic

WOODS HOLE, July 17—A lonely stretch of water 75 miles southeast of here was searched today by the crew of the coastguard cutter Pontchartrain, ordered to watch for all traces of wreckage of the seaplane V-164, which carried three men to death in a crash while on a mercy flight.

Official secrecy shrouded details of the accident and five survivors who were rescued by the oceanographic survey ketch Atlantis refused to discuss the tragedy.

Captain Frederick S. McMurray of the Atlantis advanced the theory that a "gas explosion" took place just after the huge, silver seaplane had taken off with an ill member of the Atlantis crew aboard.

EXPLOSION HEARD

The blast of an explosion was heard and next the V-164 was seen in the waves, like a crippled bird. Captain McMurray said fragments of the plane were scattered on the surface of the water and he believes the three men killed were blown to bits.

The victims were Lieutenant William L. Clemmer, commander and pilot of the seaplane, of Hewlett, L. I.; John Radan, Jr., aviation pilot, of Bessemer, Pa.; and George Priest of Falmouth, member of the Atlantis crew who was to have been transferred to a hospital because of pneumonia.

While the Pontchartrain continued to patrol the scene of the disaster, a coast guard board of inquiry opened an investigation at Floyd Bennett field, Long Island.

Three uninjured survivors of the crash, taken to Staten Island by the cutter Campbell, appeared before the board today.

TWO INJURED

They were Carl A. Simon, Williamsville, N. Y.; Charles R. Whelan, Brooklyn, N. Y., who clutched a piece of steering apparatus when he was dragged from the stricken seaplane's cabin; and Walter B. Salter, Brooklyn.

Russell D. Hayes of Patchogue, L. I., and Frank L. Evers of Brooklyn were under treatment at the Staten Island Marine Hospital for serious injuries.

'Suicide Ships' At Beirut With 1000 Refugees

PARIS, July 17 (AP)—Two small German steamers loaded with Jewish refugees have been given temporary refuge at Beirut, Lebanon, following the outbreak of a pestilential disease among the passengers, French authorities announced today.

The disease developed after a wave of suicides was reported among the refugees who despaired of finding a haven after weeks of wandering.

The steamers Brealau and Osiris, carrying a total of more than 1000 passengers, were admitted to the Beirut harbor.

Another refugee-laden German ship, the Thessaly, was found to be free from disease and was obliged to put back to sea with her 800 passengers. A fourth ship, with 700 on board, was reported cruising in the same region seeking to land its refugees.

The four ships all together have aboard 2560 refugees, including many women and children.

2 HURT WHEN FIRE TRUCK HITS HOUSE

A fireman was seriously injured and an 80-year-old woman narrowly escaped death today when a runaway fire department maintenance truck plunged down Orchard Hill road, Jamaica Plain, and smashed into the front porch of a house.

The fireman, John Monohan, of Baker street, West Roxbury, was taken to City Hospital suffering from head injuries and body bruises suffered when he was thrown from the running board of the vehicle as he tried in vain to halt its mad dash.

Monohan was fixing a firebox when the truck's brakes eased off mysteriously, and it began to slide down the hill, rapidly gathering speed until it became a virtual juggernaut.

Monahan leaped for the running board, but was thrown off as the swaying truck plunged on until it wrecked the front porch at the home of William Greene, where the aged woman was sitting.

Miss Mary Carroll narrowly missed death as the vehicle crashed into the porch. She was treated for shock.

PASTOR TO GO TO ROME

LOWELL, July 17—Rev. Appleton Grannis, pastor of St. Anne Episcopal Church here for the past 27 years, has announced his resignation, to become effective in early October. He will go to Rome, Italy, to become pastor of St. Paul Episcopal Church in that city.

Britain Fixes Limit To Talks With Japs

LONDON, July 17 (INS)—Great Britain would automatically reject any dictation from Tokyo regarding its foreign policy, but no formal demands for reversal of the traditional British attitude in the Far East have been made, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain told Commons today.

Answering supplementary questions, Chamberlain agreed with Laborite Arthur Henderson's version that the Tokyo negotiations beginning Wednesday will be confined to local Tientsin issues. The British government, he said, will not agree to discussion of any modification of the principles of the nine-power treaty "behind the backs of the United States and other governments."

Referring to repeated reports that Japan is demanding a fundamental reversal of British policy, Chamberlain said:

"I would like to make it clear that this country would not and could not so act with regard to its foreign policy at the demand of another power, nor has His Majesty's government received any such demand from the Japanese government.

"In the opinion of Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, the Japanese official attitude can more correctly be described as a desire that Britain should endeavor to regard the Sino-Japanese hostilities with more understanding of Japanese difficulties.

"To attribute to Japan an intention which may be found to have no basis in fact could only prejudice success of negotiations."

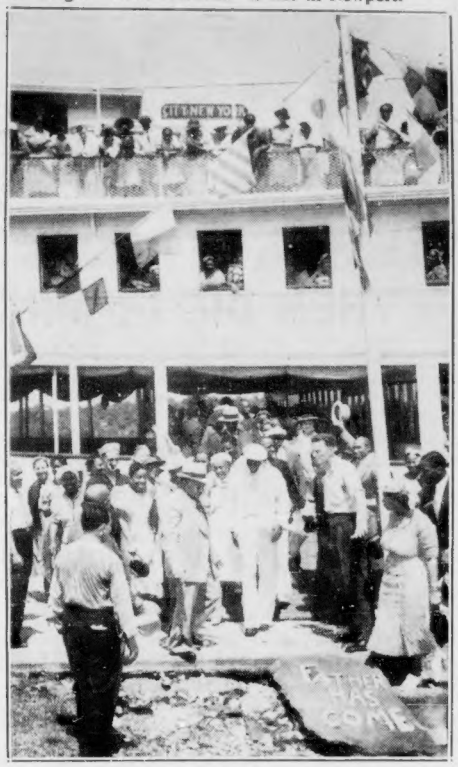
Dark Angels Joyful Over Newport Trip

NEW YORK, July 17—There was joy aplenty in Harlem today as Father Divine, Negro cult leader, pushed plans for a steamboat excursion to show 3000 of his "Angels" what "Heaven" is like in Newport.



FATHER DIVINE AND ANGELS AT KRUM ELBOW

For the bald-pated man wants his faithful ones to have a peek at the estate in ultra-fashionable Newport which Mrs. Angela C. Kaufman, wealthy widow, seeks to turn over to them.

The promised Newport visit went hand in hand today with new protestations by the Harlem cultist over the necessity of freeing America's famed Newport of "vice and debauchery." "Father" Divine plans to accomplish it all through personal evangelism.

"ANGELS" PLAN VISIT

Through John Lamb, the Harlem Messiah's secretary, it was revealed that the "angels" soon will be Newport-bound—at least for a one-day visit.

"'Father' is turning the idea over in his head," Lamb stated.

"Naturally, everybody wants to see what the new 'Heaven' looks like and we'll probably make an excursion trip up the sound to see it."

"Father" Divine and a group of his followers plan to leave for Newport within the next three weeks to complete conversion of Mrs. Kaufman's Greenough pl. home into another "Heaven."

NEWPORT SHUDDERS

Lamb said Mrs. Kaufman had turned the property over to the cult leader during an "interview," which stretched into the early morning hours Saturday. It was agreed, he said, that the papers would be held in escrow pending the settlement of title.

The question of title was raised by Countess Dorothy Fillipponi, widow of the late Richard Washburn Child, one-time ambassador to Rome and the former owner of the home.

Meanwhile, ultra-fashionable Newport shuddered in anticipation of the advent of "Father" Divine and his "angels."

60, WEDS GIRL, 16; BATTLES STABBER

NEW YORK, July 17 (INS)—Carmelo Locapria, 60-year-old bridegroom, skillfully ducked a wedding present today—a shining sharp knife consigned to his heart—while his 16-year-old bride of a night fluttered around their honeymoon apartment wringing her hands and crying, "I want to go home."

The May-December wedding of the school girl and the widower had New York's Italian colony in an uproar today and the attempted knifing of the bridegroom only contributed more confusion to the situation.

Locapria named the brother of his first wife, who died two years ago, as his assailant and said the man broke into the honeymoon apartment and tried to carve him up.

"That man comes in and says to me, 'You can't marry so soon after your wife's death,'" Locapria reported. "Then he takes out a knife and comes at me.

"I fight with him, we fight all over the room and a window is broken. Tarsilla starts to scream and all the neighbors think I'm beating her."

Tarsilla, who was Tarsilla Michielli before her marriage, still had her wedding dress on. With crowds standing around the apartment house all night jeering and shouting, she was a little nervous about staying.

Tarsilla's wedding was not the social success that had been planned. The Italian colony made its objections felt by pacing Locapria to the church. He arrived with the hot breath of his pursuers on his neck and raced down the aisle.

He was still panting when he said "I do." It was difficult to hear his words because nearly everybody in church was shouting and a confusion of noises outside indicated the arrival of police, fire apparatus and an ambulance.

After the ceremony, the happy couple left the church by a side door and with police and firemen providing interference made 75 yards to Locapria's apartment house.

Ailment Fells 6th Child as 5 Recover

As five children in the family of Rene Courturier of Readville recovered from a "mystery ailment" at Boston City Hospital today, a sixth child in the family of 11 was removed from her home to the hospital.

Rita Courturier, 13, was latest victim of what physicians presume to be a form of food poisoning. She went to the hospital shortly after noon.

Little Rose Marie, three, who yesterday was so sick hospital officials said she would not live the night, was wide-eyed and cheery this morning; and Helen, 11; George and Paul, nine-year-old twins; and Thomas, eight, all were on the road back to health.

According to their father, interviewed at his home on Vaughan street, Readville, the six, with their five brothers and sisters, went on a blueberry picking expedition Saturday.

"All the children ate the same food," he explained. "We all had frankfurts and beans for supper. Then Paul got sick.

"He got so bad we had to call the doctor, but before he could come Rose and Thomas were sick. They all went to the hospital. Helen and George went to church yesterday and later they became ill."

Doctors agreed the children ate something that disagreed with them but couldn't figure what it was.

72, But She'll Hop the World

CHICAGO, July 17 (AP)—Mrs. Virginia L. Pfuderer, 72, a grandmother, plans to board a plane tomorrow to begin a trip around the world by air.

United Airline officials believed she would be the oldest woman to make a prearranged world tour solely by airplane.

The trip was expected to take 32 days and cost $1969.20.

WIVES of miners entombed 181 feet below ground in Duvin Mine, Providence, Ky., as result of dust explosion, wait fearfully for news of loved ones. Mrs. Clarence Phelps, sister of miner Forrest Dunbar, weeps her grief on friend's shoulder.

9 WRITE OF AGONY THEN DIE IN MINE

PROVIDENCE, Ky., July 17 (INS)—The nine men sought since Friday night, when a gas explosion trapped them far below ground in the Duvin mine of the Buckman Coal Company, were found dead today by rescuers who until the last moment had hoped they still would be alive.

Rescuers, penetrating to the entry where the bodies were found, said the men had scrawled notes on the mine wall in chalk telling of their desperate attempts to keep alive.

NOTES ON WALL

Nineteen other miners were killed almost instantly in the explosion, but the fate of the nine found today apparently had been even more horrible as there was evidence they had fought against approaching death.

One of notes scribbled on a wall said:

"All alive at 12:30. All praying and singing."

The note was not dated but the rescuers expressed the opinion it was written Saturday.

Another note in a similar vein bore the notation "4:30," but again there was no date.

Leaders of the rescue crew said they thought at least some of the men had lived until yesterday.

KEEP LONG VIGIL

Until the bodies were found this morning, it had been hoped the nine had built themselves a barricade against the gas, which was slowly being pumped from the mine.

Word of the find brought shrieks of anguish from several hundred relatives and friends of the trapped men, who had stood vigil throughout the day and night, praying they might be taken out alive.

The entry in which the bodies lay was almost half a mile from the point where the first 19 bodies were found. To reach the entry, rescuers had to travel almost three miles.

2 WPA Men Hurt In Staging Fall

The foreman and a rigger on the WPA project renovating the Lawrence School at B and Third streets, South Boston, were injured today by a falling staging.

Marcus C. Mullen, of Bickford avenue, Roxbury, the foreman, was directing the work of Edward Harrison, of Decatur street, Boston, as the staging was being hoisted into place, when suddenly the planks slipped and tumbled on the two men. Both were taken to City Hospital, where it was said they were suffering from shoulder injuries.

Steal Clothes Of Mine Victims

PROVIDENCE, Ky., July 17 (AP)—Thieves entered the employes' locker room at the Duvin Coal Company last night and stole "store suits" of nine explosion-trapped miners whose bodies were found early today.

They passed up the working overalls of 70 men off duty.

Machine Guns at Court in Harlan Trial

HARLAN, Ky., July 17 (AP)—Machine guns bristled in the sun outside the courthouse today as a heavy detachment of national guardsmen searched everyone entering the court room for arms at the arraignment of 246 men and women on charges growing out of last week's pitched battle between coal mine pickets and militiamen.

Dickinson Glad He Hit 'Social Brutes'

CHARLOTTE, Mich., July 17 (INS)—Luren D. Dickinson, octogenarian crusading governor of Michigan, surveyed his work and found it good today.

The governor said:

"If I have started something, like that something that stirred this great nation years ago to outlaw drinking, then it gives me the greatest satisfaction of my life."

Dickinson gained national prominence by charging "social brutes" preyed on young girls at the social functions attendant upon the recent conference of governors in New York state.

His description of the social activities at the conference was roundly criticised by other governors and officials who were in attendance.

ANSWERS HIS CRITICS

In the face of the criticism, the Governor addressed his Sunday school class in Charlotte, saying:

"If I had to tell my story again, I'd make it stronger. In the past two weeks I saw more drinking than in my entire life. It was a splendid affair, attended by fine people, but the exceptions make me think."

Answering his critics, the governor said:

"Where were their eyes? I saw it. I don't care what they said. I put my lesson across to mothers, citizens and state officials who seemed to think I had the courage to tell what others know but are afraid to speak."

Dickinson, once president of Michigan's Anti-Saloon League, was talking to 58 adults, many of whom had attended his Sunday school class for 20 years.

DEPLORES DRINKING

"Somebody has got to start it," he said, returning to the theme of a general social uplift. "What I saw in New York, mothers drinking, young girls plied with liquor and hellish beckonings towards sin-cursed haunts, makes me think.

"Years ago we had a liquor traffic which overwhelmed those who studied it. And now we seem to be right back at that old stage."

He closed with the admonition, "I'm just starting."

Seek New Law On Pardons

Specific and detailed recommendations for new legislation tightening pardon and parole recommendations will be filed this week at the State House, it was learned today.

Based on results of star chamber hearings conducted by a special commission investigating the parole situation, the recommendations will be rushed through in the face of legislative hopes of final adjournment within three weeks.

The commission's preliminary report said evidence of convicts buying their way out of prison had been uncovered.

The commission, one of its members declared, as the Ways and Means Committee deliberated its request for $10,000 more to continue the inquiry, regards the situation as of immediate importance.

"We believe immediate action should be taken," he asserted.

While members of the commission refused to discuss the actual recommendations the body will make, it was indicated that they would drastically alter the procedure leading up to executive pardons for felons.

DIVORCEE KILLS SON IN SLEEP

NEW YORK, July 17 (AP)—A divorced mother shot her 14-year-old son to death in his sleep early today, police said, and then pressed the revolver against her breast and pulled the trigger.

The woman, Mrs. Celia Cohen, 32, was arrested on a homicide charge at Beth David Hospital, where she was taken in critical condition.

Shot through the heart, the boy, Billy Cohen, died instantly. Police who broke into the Cohens' furnished room on East 91st street found Mrs. Cohen still conscious and hysterical. She was clad in a red negligee.

Police said the mother had been under treatment for a nervous disorder. They said she and the boy came here two years ago from Georgia after she obtained a divorce from Billy's father, Berry Cohen.

Police today investigated a freak explosion which occurred in a basket of clams which Louis Frederico, 24, of Albert street, Jamaica Plain, was removing from the rear of his car following a trip to Cape Cod.

There was a sudden flash and explosion, Frederico said, and a shell of one of the flying clams lacerated his right eye. He was taken to City Hospital, where physicians feared he may lose the sight of the eye.

'Spite Suicide' Leaves Wife With Four Fatherless Children

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 17—Four children were fatherless here today after Leo Britton, 37-year-old shoe worker—unsuccessful in a 80-mile-an-hour automobile suicide attempt—finally ended his life with a rifle bullet.

The victim, found slouched in a closet of his home, was pronounced a suicide by Medical Referee Reginald Fiske.

A few momehts earlier, Britton had escaped with hardly a scratch after speeding his wife's automobile madly down a hill and into a stone wall.

The double suicide try was aftermath of an argument with his wife over use of the latter's new automobile. Police said he shouted:

"I told you I'd get even with you for not letting me use the car."

Then stepping from the wreckage, piled high a short distance from his home, he ran past her to the house and took his life with a small calibre rifle, the official report stated.

Mrs. Britton told Lieut. Michael Whalen and Inspector George Welch that she and her husband had quarreled earlier in the day over her refusal to permit him to use her two-weeks' old automobile because he had lost his license about a year ago.

AMID HEAVY TRAFFIC

The wild ride was witnessed by a throng of spectators, and the careening machine narrowly missed a number of cars on the heavily traveled highway to Hampton Beach, across which Britton hurtled in his suicide attempt.

In addition to his wife Adrienne, he leaves four children, Theresa, 16; Dorothy, 14; Raymond, 10 and Eva, 9. A fifth child, Lorraine, four, was killed by an automobile in front of her home about a year ago.

A shoe worker whose wife is employed in the same factory, Britton lived with his family at the corner of Garvin ave. and Candia rd., on the outskirts of this city.

Mrs. Britton told police that she and her husband had quarreled frequently over her refusal to permit him to drive the car, which she bought.

Apparently he found the car keys where she had hidden them in the house, Mrs. Britton said, and taking the machine from the barn drove it to the top of the nearby hill.

There he obtained two large boulders, placed them in the rear of the sedan to hold it down and started on the mad dash. To startled spectators the machine was travelling at about 80 miles an hour as it roared down the hill, shot across the Hampton Beach highway and, with a crash that was heard for blocks, struck the cement wall around the Britton home.

The machine had attained so much momentum that it ploughed completely through the wall and embedded itself in the lawn.

As his wife, who had been ironing, rushed out of the house, he managed to extricate himself from the wreckage, and with a brief word about "getting even," hurried inside. Then came a muffled shot. When Inspector Welch opened the closet door, Britton's body was in a kneeling position.

In a pocket police found two life insurance policies and a bank book.

Fired Gun Into Mouth After Quarrel With Wife

Renew Efforts to Lift Sunken British Sub

LIVERPOOL, July 17 (AP)—Attempts to raise the sunken British submarine Thetis were resumed today when two new "messenger" wires were placed under the forward end of the keel.

The salvage company planned later to place lifting wires under the submersible which sank off Liverpool with the loss of 99 lives during a practice dive June 1.

RENEW WORK ON SQUALUS

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 17—After hours of exploratory work, Navy divers today were ready for bottom dives to find out what happened to the submarine Squalus when she plunged bottomward again last Thursday.

Already, divers have discovered two of the missing pontoons, both about 80 feet below the surface.

Both were found to be not greatly damaged and are to be brought aloft as soon as tangled lines and air hoses are loosened.

But what position the submersible assumed on the ocean floor 240 feet below still was uncertain today, although soundings indicated the craft was now on more even keel.

It was believed the stern was not so deeply embedded in the mud and that the bow was not as elevated as before. It is believed that the stern now is encased in about 10 feet of mud.

Salvage workers continued to clear wreckage of lines and air hoses, preparatory to bringing the pontoons to the Navy Yard for repairs.

A new plan of operation to lift the submarine is not to be drafted until after several dives are made to the hull itself.

F.D. in New Appeal For Neutrality Bill

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 17—President Roosevelt today threw the full weight of his administration into a struggle to revive his neutrality program and force it through at this session of Congress.

With Secretary of State Cordell Hull at his side, the President conferred for an hour-and-a-half with the "big four" in Congress—Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead, Senate Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky and House Majority Leader Rayburn of Texas.

LAST DITCH APPEAL

It was apparent that the President and Secretary Hull made an unusually forceful appeal to the leaders to keep an impatient Congress in Washington and bring the neutrality issue to a showdown in the Senate.

Barkley, spokesmen for the congressional leaders, said:

"I don't think Congress would deliberately adjourn in the face of an overwhelming duty that it might be called upon to perform."

On the basis of this statement, it appeared that early adjournment would be impossible. All observers anticipate a prolonged debate if neutrality legislation reaches the Senate floor.

SEES LENDING PASSING

Speaker Bankhead, however, said: "We will be here two or three weeks longer to clean up unfinished business."

The Speaker said that the new lending program would be passed by the House. Neutrality, he added, is up to the Senate.

Majority Leader Barkley contributed to the confusion over quick adjournment. He was asked weather Congress could adjourn by August 1.

"I don't think, so," Barkley replied.

The administration's renewed fight for neutrality placed its congressional leaders in a strange position. Some of them already have conceded the neutrality issue is dead for this session, and have prepared for adjournment in the last week of July.

LONG FIGHT AHEAD

There is no doubt, however, Congress will be kept here for many weeks if the neutrality issue is brought up in the Senate. A bi-partisan bloc of 34 senators has formed to fight to the finish the administration's proposal to lift the embargo on shipment of U. S. arms to warring nations.

Barkley was reluctant to talk after the conference as were the others. Secretary Hull's presence—an unusual occurrence—left no doubt that the President was ready to go the limit to get action.

The Senate leader indicated that a series of White House conferances may be held this week to chart the course of neutrality and other important pending administration legislation.

NORRIS BACKS ACTION

The capital saw in the conference today a bit of the fighting Roosevelt who, contrary to reports from his leaders that Congress wants to go home, is demanding it stay and act on neutrality.

Senator George W. Norris, one of the few men left in Congress who voted against U. S. entry into the World War, also called today for neutrality legislation to stop Europe's dictators.

Declaring the "financial interest of big business" drove the United States into the 1914-1918 conflict, the 78-year-old Nebraska Independent, in siding publicly with President Roosevelt, described the conduct of Germany, Italy and Japan as "barbarous, indefensible and inhuman."

Hand Russia Outline Of 3-Power 'Aid' Pact

MOSCOW, July 17 (AP)—New British-French proposals for a three-power mutual assistance pact were delivered today to Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff.

British Ambassador Sir William Seeds, Special British Envoy William Strang and French Ambassador Paul Emile Naggiar carried the proposals to the Kremlin.

German War Dead Moved From France

U.S. ON LOTTERY TRAIL

Assistant United States Attorney Jackson J. Holtz and Postal Inspector Tennyson Jefferson were on a mysterious errand in New York today, as federal authorities here moved swiftly in an 11th-hour roundup of new evidence to be presented July 24 in a grand jury investigation of an alleged $20,000,000 fake lottery racket.

New York objective of Holtz and Jefferson was understood to be the questioning of a number of prospective witnesses.

'13' FAILS TO WORRY GOVERNOR'S SON

Leverett Saltonstall, Jr., son of the Governor, and his attractive bride-to-be, Nancy Smith, of Groton, want all the world to know they're not the least bit superstitious.

That's why their wedding party attendants will number exactly 13 when they go altarward August 26 in the chapel of Groton School.

Saltonstall, Jr.

Four of the 13 are Emily Saltonstall, sister of the bridegroom; Elizabeth Timmins of Groton, Roberts Lang of Chatham and Mrs. Robert B. Cutler (Marian Lawrence), all attendants of the bride.

Others making up that often-considered ill-fated number include Peter B. Saltonstall, who will serve as his brother's best man, and eight ushers. The latter include William S. Rowe, 2d, of Cincinnati; David Scull, 3, Tucker Burr, 3d, and Arthur Burpee, Jr., of Boston; John Grew of Dover, Alexander Irving of Wilmington, Del., Henry Chatfield of Cincinnati and Lewis Neilson of Jericho, L. I.

Leader in Fatal Jail Break Gets Long Term

PITTSFIELD, July 17—Joseph Martin, 32, alleged ringleader of a Berkshire County Jail break on July 10, in which a companion, Earl Burrows, 25, Pittsfield, was killed, was sentenced here today to serve from three to five years plus two-and-one-half to three years for carrying a revolver.

Martin and Burrows crawled through a ventilating system from their cells to the roof, and then climbed down a drainpipe. Burrows, so-called "Pittsfield bad boy" was shot dead when cornered.

Kennedy Finds Job Difficult But Will Stay

LONDON, July 17 (AP)—United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy today described London as the most difficult place for an American diplomat to make a success because "here you make good by what you prevent happening rather than cause to happen."

The remarks were made in a reference to the current European tension as Kennedy spoke at a Pilgrims' luncheon for Douglas Jenkins, American consul-general here, who has been appointed by President Roosevelt to be United States Ambassador to Bolivia.

"I am not planning to leave England," Kennedy said. ". . . in spite of the fact that every morning when I get up I see either that my successor has been named or that I'm due to leave."

Girl, 16, Warns Dad, Then Fires

DANVILLE, Ill., July 17 (AP)—Because he violated a peace pledge made two weeks ago at the request of his family, Andrew Heath, 39, was dead today, slain, police said, by a blast from a shotgun fired by his 16-year-old daughter, Alta.

Lieutenant Leo Bireline said the girl admitted she fired the fatal shot after telling her father:

"Well, Daddy, this is what I said I was going to do."

Bireline said the girl, held without formal charge, told him Heath, a brickyard worker, came home drunk and "started abusing me and the other children."

Enraged, Alta seized the shotgun, Bireline related, but Heath took the weapon away from her. Later, while her father was standing in the yard, Alta took the gun, stepped out on the porch and shot him, the officer said.

Heath was placed under a peace bond recently at the request of his wife, Mildred, who complained he threatened her. Alta told Bireline her father frequently mistreated her and the other children.

CALLAHAN PROBE TOLD COST OF STORM WORK EXCESSIVE

Hurricane and flood work exceeded ordinary contract estimates, in one case by approximately 1000 per cent, it was charged today with the opening of the second week of a battle of figures centering around Governor Saltonstall's move to oust Public Works Commissioner William F. Callahan on charges of "squandering" state funds.

Ralph Houghton, deputy state comptroller who was lent to a three-man, all-Republican commission which investigated the public works department, presented an analysis of contracts for work on the Mohawk Trail and Jacob's Ladder with amounts already paid for the two jobs.

He produced figures purporting to show that on one contract, awarded to B. Perini & Sons of Framingham for work on the Ladder route, estimates called for 4950 yards of channel excavation, but the state already had been billed for 52,270 yards.

Attorney Charles B. Rugg, counsel for the commission, called to the attention of Governor Saltonstall, who personally is presiding over the ouster proceedings, that two contractors testified previously they had offered to do the work at $1.50 a cubic yard as compared with the $3.50 price allotted under the Perini contracts.

MISSED $181,040 SAVING

The deputy state comptroller then asserted the state would have saved $104,000 on channel excavation alone in that specific contract had the work been awarded to either of those two contractors.

Houghton then presented tables of comparisons showing the differences between prices established last Sept. 29 by the public works department shortly after the double disaster, and higher allotments awarded the Perini firm for work on the Jacob's Ladder and to the C. J. Maney firm of Somerville for work on the Mohawk Trail.

He testified that the state would have saved a total of $181,040 of work already done on the Mohawk Trail provided the Sept. 29 prices had been specified and not increased in the Maney contracts.

Callahan already had declared he would show the two routes were notorious as "financial graveyards of contracting" and that the emergency type of work and the necessity for carrying it on in the dead of winter forced an increase in cost to the state.

$200-A-Month Alimony for Mrs. Teague

Mrs. Rita Lynn Teague, formerly of Boston and now living in Rye, N. Y., will have $200-a-month alimony as long as she stays single, it was revealed in New York today with granting of her divorce by Supreme Court Justice Aaron Steuer.

In addition, Judge Steuer ruled she is entitled to half of any commissions her former husband, Walter D. Teague, Jr., earns as an architect and designer.

Divorce proceedings followed an early morning raid in May, when private detectives allegedly found a sparsely clad blonde in Teague's New York apartment.

Mrs. Mary Murphy, Labor Leader, Buried

4 Armies to Unite If Hitler Marches

By the Associated Press

Britain and France, co-ordinating their military forces against the eventuality of a European war, extended army staff talks today to two of their allies, Poland and Turkey.

The new inspector-general of the British overseas forces, Major-General Sir Edmund Ironside, left London for Warsaw for discussions with Polish authorities.

A unified command over British, French and Polish forces in wartime was understood to be one of the subjects for discussion in Warsaw.

WOULD CONVINCE NAZIS

French staff officers arranged talks with Turkish military experts at Ankara on defense plans under the French-Turkish pact.

Poles said they regarded Sir Edmund's visit as a well-timed gesture which should convince Germany of Polish-British solidarity in practical military matters as well as in oral declarations.

At the same time, War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha and a number of high British officers started a tour of anti-aircraft defenses in northeast England. In preparation for a mock raid of 100 French planes, probably tomorrow, air defenses were manned in numerous sectors.

JAP TALKS POSTPONED

While Britain looked to her home defenses, informed Tokyo sources were unanimous in predicting failure for the British-Japanese conference on Far Eastern questions which have embittered relations of the two powers.

Talks scheduled for today were postponed until Wednesday to permit London time to reply to reports sent by British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie on the first session Saturday.

"The British and Japanese positions are so completely at variance there is no room for discussion," said persons acquainted with the Saturday conversations.

Japan has insisted that the talks cover far-reaching matters of British policy in China instead of being limited to seeking settlement of the Tientsin dispute over Japan's blockade of British and French concessions.

The Far Eastern situation was further complicated by continued outbursts along the border between Japanese-supported Manchoukuo and Soviet-backed Outer Mongolia.

Why U. S. Girl Cut Hitler Bid

SAN REMO, Italy, July 17 (AP) —Miriam Verne, Pittsburgh, Pa., dancer, explained today that a prior contract for a four-day appearance at the municipal casino here forced her to pass up Adolf Hitler's invitation to appear at Munich last night in the light opera, "Merry Widow."

The explanation was given upon the arrival here of the blue-eyed dancer whose performances in Germany have been attended several times by Hitler.

Miss Verne planned to go from here to Belguim and said she hoped later to return to Germany.

Soviets Bomb Jap Rail Center

HSINKING, Manchoukuo, July 17 (AP)—Manchoukuoan advices received here reported that eight Soviet warplanes attacked the railway center of Halunarshan yesterday—the fourth such raid within a week.

The invading planes dropped several dozen bombs, the advices said, destroying four railway cars and the post office building and wounding four persons.

Halunarshan is in northwestern Manchoukuo, about 125 miles from the outer Mongolian border.

The raid was believed by some observers to have been the Mongolian answer to a diplomatic protest filed by Manchoukuo over a dawn raid yesterday on Furoruji (Fularki) which represented the deepest thrust yet made into Manchoukuo by Mongol-Soviet forces. Furoruji is almost 400 miles from the Mongolian border.

U. S. Navy Speeds Work On 101 New War Craft

WASHINGTON, July 17 (AP)—The expanding navy listed today 101 warcraft and auxiliaries of all sizes as under construction, a record peacetime fleet which by official estimates will cost $1,000,000,000.

Aside from the ships under construction, the navy by its latest compilation included 369 vessels of all classes and ages, with an aggregate tonnage of 1,265,690. Only Great Britain boasts a greater armada.

Of the ways or to be started shortly are these additional vessels: eight battleships, six of 35,000 tons and two of 45,000 tons; two aircraft carriers, five light cruisers, 20 submarines, 42 destroyers, 15 auxiliaries, three submarine chasers, and six motor torpedo boats.

CONGRESS DROPS WPA HOUR FIGHT

By the Associated Press

Virtual abandonment of congressional efforts to rescind the controversial 130-hour work month on WPA projects brought these developments today in the widespread relief walkouts:

1—David Lasser, head of the Workers Alliance, disclosed that the organization's national board was voting on the question of ending temporarily all work stoppages in which the alliance has been participating.

2—John L. Lewis, CIO president, said in Chicago that the new relief bill "is a direct repudiation of the pledges made by the Democratic party in its 1936 program."

3—Declaring that maintenance of the new wage regulations constitutes a lockout by the government, James L. McDevitt, president of the Philadelphia Building Trades Council, ordered the council's 8000 members to stay away from work on 41 WPA projects today.

Under rules McDevitt said to cause expulsion of any member who reports to a "lockout" employer.

OUST 20,000 STRIKERS

The decision of a group of senators led by Senator Murray (D) of Montana, to cease their attempt to restore the prevailing wage system for WPA work was followed by a statement by Representative Sabath (D) of Illinois that he did not know whether he would call for action on a similar proposal in the House.

It was the cessation of this action on July 1, and the substitution of the 130-hour month, that caused WPA workers that started the strikes in many cities throughout the United States.

Week end estimates indicated that at least 20,000 WPA employes had been dismissed for having been five days during the walkouts.

In New York city, officials began dismissing at the rate of 1,000 a day 75,000 WPA workers who had been on the rolls 18 months or more in conformity with the new relief act.

A list of the workers employed by the Federal Theatre project was ordered Wednesday by the WPA Teachers Union (AFL), representing 30,000 teachers and educational workers on WPA projects in New York.

BACK TO HOME RETIRE

Lieut. Col. Lester D. Brownell, state WPA administrator, said the dismissal of workers was "not a furlough—it is a straight lay off."

Members of the Congress were expected to return to their districts Saturday, dean of the House and head of its rules committee [illegible] to still [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Jailed Month In Bike Theft

An itinerant who decided he would rather ride than walk the rest of the way from Maine to New Jersey was sentenced today to a month in the House of Correction for "borrowing" a 12-year-old newsboy's bicycle because his feet hurt.

Judge Daniel W. Casey meted out the sentence in West Roxbury Court after the man, John R. Goodall, 24, who gave no address, had explained his reasons for taking a bicycle owned by Kindrith Wood of Meredith street, West Roxbury.

"I was tired, and my feet hurt," explained Goodall, who was captured by Sergeant John M. White after a long chase in a police car and on foot.

The judge gave him a chance for a month's rest.

Coughlin Wants Air Reply to F.D.'s Son

Demand was made today on the Mutual Broadcasting Company in behalf of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, for time on the air to answer an attack by Elliot Roosevelt, son of the President described as the "Little Sir Echo of the New Deal."

Young Roosevelt was given the time Saturday night by John Stinson, aide to Father Coughlin, and broadcast Father Coughlin's program.

Stinson made public at the conclusion of the regular weekly broadcast a letter addressed to Mutual President Frank Mason requesting equal time for Father Coughlin to answer young Roosevelt's charges of anti-Semitism and financial interest in his silver monetization activities.

Ridiculing the charge of anti-Semitism the "Voice" declared that such charges would be laughed at by any of Mr. Roosevelt's trade boys.

"The charge of anti-Semitism is the hue and cry raised against all who attack Communism," he asserted.

DENIES PERSONAL GAIN

Sharpest fire was reserved to answer the charge that Fr. Coughlin profited personally from funds contributed to the Shrine of the Little Flower.

"Unlike some we need not name, Fr. Coughlin has never taken advantage of requests to write newspaper articles or any other opportunities for private gain," he said.

Col. Lindbergh's declaration the Nazis demanded that the Mutual Broadcasting Co. which broadcast Hitler's address, give Fr. Coughlin equal time to answer the charges made by the President and

I hereby request equal time and an answer to the following questions:

"If Coughlin doesn't like my remarks, I extend him an invitation to appear on my program at any time he desires to do so."

TALKS TO LABOR

Fr. Coughlin has already come with [illegible] challenged labor [illegible] of Communistic-minded leadership," denying at the same time that he was opposed to organized labor.

"Kick out your Communist leaders and you will win the respect of every man and woman in the United States," Fr. Coughlin said.

"Find among your ranks a leader courageous enough to sponsor resolutions to sever connections with every foreign 'ism and crush them out of existence."

She Wants More Cash

Hollywood Notes

—By LOUELLA O. PARSONS—

HOLLYWOOD, July 17 - The summer heat went up a notch Saturday when Ros alind Russell started battling for more do-re-mi on her new M-G-M contract. Her time is up at that studio after five years and just at a time when "The Women," according to a privileged insider, puts her right on top.

Chatter in Hollywood. Praise from Caesar, indeed, is the compliment Orson Welles paid John Barrymore when he saw him in "My Dear Children" in Chicago. Said the Mars terror, "If I had a son who wanted to be an actor I would make him sit at the feet of Barrymore."

A line or two: Brenda Joyce, who hates the taste of lipstick, had five made with peppermint flavor and not to be outdone, Shirley Temple now has licorice tooth powder.

JOAN BLONDELL ROMANTIC COMEDY FOR KEITH MEMORIAL

COMING TO KEITH'S—Joan Blondell's latest gay, romantic comedy, "Good Girls Go To Paris," comes to the Keith Memorial Thursday, with previews Wednesday night at 7 and 10 o'clock. Playing one of the featured roles is Walter Connolly and he is shown above in a scene with Joan.

'Good Girls Go To Paris' Opens at Keith's Thursday

"Good Girls Go To Paris," Columbia's gay romantic comedy co-starring Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell together with Universal's drama "I Stole A Million" with George Raft and Claire Trevor, make up the screen program opening Thursday at the Keith Memorial Theater.

Preview screenings of "Good Girls Go To Paris" will be held on Wednesday night at 7 and 10 o'clock.

Hailed as one of the gayest laugh romances of the season, "Good Girls Go To Paris" is the second costarring venture of the comedy team which made last season's "There's Always A Woman" so delightful. Miss Blondell is seen in the new film as the prototype of many American girls, in that she wants to go to Paris.

However, she choses a delightfully unorthodox method of attaining her ambition. She becomes a waitress in a college town hot spot hoping to find a rich college lad whose father will provide the financial backing for her trip by "persuading" her to forget the boy. Unfortunately, in addition to this tendency toward gold-digging the pretty girl waitress suffers from a strong case of love which prevents her from actually accepting the money to "forget." Important featured roles are played by Walter Connolly, Alan Curtis, Joan Perry and Isabel Jeans.

George Raft plays the title role in "I Stole A Million" with such sincerity that one lives every moment of his mad career as the man who wanted to go straight but decided he couldn't. He fights hard to try it again when he meets the girl of his dreams. She inspires him to great heights. But minor misdemeanors of his past haunt his new happiness until he turns at bay against the world.

Then comes a "con that is said to have astonished even Hollywood. The girl is Claire Trevor, whose popularity soared to still greater peaks because of her sterling performance as "Stagecoach."

As an added attraction is Walt Disney's new color cartoon, "The Hockey Champ," featuring Donald Duck in his latest lizzy adventures.

Hollywood Stars To Appear at Dennis

Hollywood stars Glenda Farrell and Douglass Montgomery will appear in S. N. Behrman's brilliant comedy "Brief Moment," at Cape Playhouse, Dennis on Cape Cod, for the week beginning Monday, August 14. DEATH'S STORY

Of Fatal Crash, Rescue of Five

1. Tragedy Ahead

Mercy plane sighted, seamen of oceanographic survey ship Atlantis row out with pneumonia-stricken comrade . . . for transportation to land and treatment.

2. Contact—The Coast Guard plane, V-164, settles into the water, takes aboard the stricken man, and prepares to depart as the whaleboat pulls away. But there is an explosion, the whaler turns about . . . and (insert) crew aids survivors from the plane.

3. Going Down!—These pictures tell the story of only a few seconds. The story of whirling propellers, the explosion, the feverish attempt at rescue . . . then the slowly sinking plane.

4. Tomb of Three—Death now takes over the story. In this sinking wreckage are three bodies . . . of the stricken man, of two members of the plane's crew . . . all believed blown to bits.

5. Survivors—Lucky to be alive today are (l. to r.) Carl Simon, Charles Whalen and Walter Salter . . . pictured as they came ashore after their dramatic rescue.

6. Injured—Two of the five survivors were seriously injured . . . and Frank Evers, 38, heroic radioman is taken ashore at Staten Island, N. Y.

KEEP U.S. OUT OF WAR

AMERICA'S [illegible] of peace, the hopes of [illegible] democracy and everything [illegible] depend to a large extent on YOU.

War [illegible] destroy the nation's [illegible] that means [illegible] wars the time [illegible] YOU [illegible]

If you want your country to mind its own business, attend to its own affairs and build American prosperity and security for Americans, VOICE YOUR DEMAND and TELL THE WORLD.

The emblem and slogan at the top of this column give you that OPPORTUNITY.

Get a pair of scissors, clip it and paste it near the inspection sticker on the windshield of your automobile in such a manner that it will not obscure your view, or display it in the principal window of your home.

Let the men who represent you in your government know now that YOU STAND FOR PEACE.

Let them have PROOF that they have YOUR support as they resist the siren song of war mongers and the invitation to bloodshed abroad.

WORLD'S FAIR TOURISTS will come to New England by the thousands, says the Massachusetts Development and Industrial Commission.

At least 40 per cent of the exposition's patrons contemplate visits to our shore and mountain resorts and trips to the numerous cities and towns of historical interest.

But SIGHT is not the only pleasure this part of the country affords.

Really to make the acquaintance of the Bay State, the traveler must be prepared to EAT as well as to SEE.

"The visitor's appetite needs only speak," says the Commission, "and not many rods further along the highway he will find some truly distinguished eating.

"He should start with griddle cakes and country sausages in the Berkshires and eat his way through the green corn and baked beans right on to the lobster and clams of the seacoast.

"Then he will have literally and figuratively savored Massachusetts."

IS IGNORANCE BLISS? Millions who read the results of a recent country-wide survey by the Gallup American Institute of Public Opinion are wondering.

This survey shows that TWENTY-FIVE PER CENT of the adult population of the United States are UNAWARE THAT THEY PAY TAXES.

This twenty-five per cent are mostly, the report says, found among those who earn $20 a week or less. Many actually said they were not taxpayers.

As a matter of fact, most of them are making only $20 a week or under just because they DO pay taxes.

They pay taxes without having the money visibly taken from them.

Investigations conducted this year show that persons earning $20 a week pay about $100 in taxes—ALMOST TWO DOLLARS A WEEK. And they encounter some kind of levy on EVERYTHING they buy.

THEY HAVE A GUEST, THOUGH THEY DON'T SEE HIM
He's the Tax Grabber and He's There to Collect

There are taxes in the dime one drops in the subway box.

There is a tax hidden in every item of the fifty-cent lunch a girl eats at noon.

There is a tax concealed in the five-cent ice cream cone a mother buys for her child.

Even the lead pencil sold for three cents has a tax upon it.

A Baby's Laugh

A BABY, you will notice, never does a job by halves . . . for when he cries, he cries, and when he laughs, he really laughs . . . and his laughter's as contagious as the mumps or whooping cough . . . and before you realize it, you yourself are fairly off.

You hear a baby's laughter, and before you know it, you . . . are laughing like the dickens, and it's genuine laughter, too . . . Spontaneously from babies gales of lusty laughter leap . . . But we—we often laugh indeed so that we may not weep.

—Paul T. Gilbert.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt -:- MY DAY

HYDE PARK N. Y., July 17.—Someone has sent me a page from a letter contest carried on by a Chicago newspaper. The winning letter in answer to the question: "Who is it in this world you would most like to know?" was a letter which sets forth the reasons why Ghandi, as the person above all others the writer would like to become acquainted with.

Ghandi has been given by his followers the name "Mahatma," which means "great soul." I think that it is rather fine that in our materialistic country, someone should be moved to recognize in him a personality that they would like to know above all others.

MAY G. SCHAEFER, president of the Soroptimist Club of Alhambra, California, writes me that they have become very much interested in the California Institution for Women at Tehachapi. Two years ago they set aside a small sum of money to be disbursed for the discharged women prisoners under the personal direction of the state parole officer. She tells me that this fund was not expected to be a revolving fund, but that it is working out that way.

The sums given are usually very small, to meet such small needs as a new hat, a night's lodging or a dress to be cleaned, and so far the women have almost always looked upon the sums given them as loans and returned them as soon as possible.

This is interesting for it shows a feeling of responsibility on their part for other women in similar circumstances and a desire to give those women the same chance which they, themselves, have had.

CHARMING FIRST LADY PREPARES OUTDOOR MEAL
Picnics Provide Enjoyment at Hyde Park Estate

IN ADDITION, the club feels that much of crime is due to economic maladjustment. We felt that developing of new fields of work, new interests behind prison walls, would make these women fit members of society upon their return to the world which we all know."

To help in this readjustment, the club has subscribed to a garden magazine, a magazine teaching knitting and other handwork, and one teaching the dressmaking crafts, and made them available to the inmates.

They are now starting to collect books which will form the nucleus of a circulating library within the prison and contain not only fiction, but an English dictionary and books teaching shorthand.

Undoubtedly this club is doing a great deal for the women inmates of the prison, but I am inclined to think the members of the club are deriving just as much good from what they are doing as are the women they are helping.

These personal contacts and observations which will give them an insight into human nature, an understanding of the difficulties and problems met by all types of human beings, cannot help but be educational for the women who are making this opportunity for themselves.

Human Side of News -:- by EDWIN C. HILL

UP AND DOWN Broadway, or, as Mr. Winchell calls it, the Main Stem, there is gleeful chuckling and chortling among the hooters and spooters of the vaudeville tribe. They whose living was whisked away from them by new and competing [illegible] trends.

They think they see the [illegible] writing on the wall for their public enemy No. 1, the moving pictures. It is as clear to them as was that projected light spot on the wall in Belshazzar's palace.

Television is going to put the movies right in the ash can, so say the snow folk of the old Orpheum days. I find them over and street corner up and down Broadway buzzing with that kind of talk. They firmly believe the movies are as dead as the Pat and Mike joke.

Better still, from their point of view, vaudeville suits television to a gnat's heel. Some of the entertainers already are hooked up for workouts through the [illegible] experimental stages, and the profession is lit up with a new hope.

TO DATE, the televisers are having trouble in catching a played out spectacle, such as baseball game or a great public ceremonial. As the television camera is today there is [illegible] limit to the spread of landscape,

TELEVISION COMES!
But Motion Pictures Won't Go

depth and swiftly changing facts which can be managed with it.

The best results are obtained with fairly close-up shots, with the goings on safely in range, and under control, subject to repeated rehearsals if necessary in short, studio work and so far some form of vaudeville seems to come nearer to answering else in meeting these specifications.

The television people are [illegible] that they will have to offer something more exciting than a speaker or a singer. They are combing every field for possibilities and that is bringing out of the old midtown actors' boarding houses forgotten men and women who used to get top-billing in electric lights, 15 or 20 years ago.

I WAS SURPRISED to discover how the vaudevillians blame the moving pictures for their troubles. This hostility is more marked among the old troupers, who used to get their living from the road, rather than among the younger and less travelled entertainers.

Their story is that it was the Loew chain show monopoly of theaters in inland cities and towns, rather than better entertainment which put the short-turn specialties out of business.

I have an idea that the movies are a pretty lively corpse and that television hasn't yet put on its seven-league boots. Technicians tell me that there are tremendous problems still to be solved, and that the radio and movie magnates have no call to be losing sleep.

There is also to be noted the fact that the two latter are no longer gim-crack affairs, and will not easily be dislodged from their hard-won place as purveyors of both information and entertainment, even by such a dazzling miracle as television.

By GEORGE HOLLAND

MONDAY MUSINGS: The American reading public was treated to a pair of unique literary effusions within a week . . . One was the "acceptance telegram" composed by Father Divine when he replied to Mrs. Angela Kaufman's offer of a Newport "Heaven" . . . The Harlem hero really went to town in that one. . . The message bears reading, if for no other purpose than to quote Ed Regan's admiring and eloquent appraisal of the content . . . Wheresoever I am convinced from within . . . telegraphed Father Divine, "that my personal acts will be more constructive in the work of bringing the abolition of starvation and discrimination and establishing right according to the Constitution and six amendments I am glad to be represented in the act of establishing fact and integrity according to the Declaration of Independence." . . . Mr. Regan, who hails from Lowell and has devoted much of his life to the improvement of the breed of thoroughbreds, studied the message with as much care as he might devote to picking a winner. Then he said: "That's bodacious"

"BODACIOUS" TOO was the arraignment by Governor Luren D. Dickinson of Michigan of the alleged high-jinks countenanced by his fellow chief executives at their conference in New York . . . The Governor of Michigan gave newspaper readers a taste of Victorian prose . . . But the Governor's fulminations may be socially significant . . . Consider this point in his blast: "I hadn't measured fully the new liberties under repeal; . . ." Some of those "liberties?" . . . Here's how Governor Dickinson described them: "Fascinations, allurements, high life customs and customs, bewildering scenery and surroundings, (quite) paired with or alone with strangers at glowing functions with unlimited flow of every variety of liquors at every turn, with dance halls, drinking tables on the side, richly-dressed and suave-voiced hosts and uniformed waiters, repeatedly women visitors of every age, including these girls, to drink . . .

I GUESS THE GOVERNOR missed visiting Broadway when New York held 4000 speakeasies . . . The "variety of liquors" then depended on whether the stuff was blended in a clean sink, which made it excellent, or whether the "alky" used was Belgian, wood or denatured . . . The Governor of Michigan should have browsed a bit . . . Broadway then . . . What the Michigan governor said about his fellow governors' party was a collectors' piece, a choice sample of Victorian literature . . . We can say that's ALL it was and not an opening blast in a campaign to give the country back to the bootleggers . . . Not deliberately, of course . . . But as a first salute by the Anti-Saloon League to repeal repeal

Then he says (which I don't believe) that The Dutchman turned to him and said, "Dick, you must hate me for this" . . . (Mind you, Martin was dying a few feet away.) Then, get this, the quote is Davis's . . . "For he realized what a horrible thing he had done, shooting down Jule RIGHT IN FRONT OF ME . . . he knew there was not supposed to be any rough stuff when I was around" . . . It wouldn't have been a horrible thing, we are given to suppose, if Martin had merely been erased . . . But "right in front of me!" The poor "Kid Mouthpiece" betrayed

Only the Dead Are Safe and Sure

A GROUP of youngsters discussing marriage with it safe to tackle Family Life before one was 25? Most enthusiastic "Yesses!" . . . but an equal number of cautious or frankly embittered "No's!" Most of them deciding it wasn't smart until you'd eliminated the worst hazards

One from CLARK DUNN, 23, of Santa Barbara Calif., was typical. Clark's strong for marriage, BUT

"I won't take chances of making a girl or myself unhappy by too early marriage. I want to be a success . . . I want my wife to be proud of me. I expect to have to take chances if I wish to get a foothold in this complex civilization of ours . . . But the time to gamble is before marriage, not after. After marriage I expect to settle down, run no more risks."

WAIT UNTIL EVERYTHING'S SAFE—that isn't just one youngster's attitude toward marriage . . . IT'S FAST BECOMING ALL AMERICAN'S ATTITUDE TOWARD LIFE! Rather tragic in a land that was founded by the spunkiest gamblers the world ever saw! And peopled by generations whose Favorite Dish was DANGER

IT'S MORE THAN TRAGIC . . . FOR THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS A SAFE AND SURE EXISTENCE. A LIFE WITHOUT RISKS . . . LIFE IS GROWTH, AND GROWTH MEANS ACTION, AND ACTION INEVITABLY IMPLIES STRUGGLES AND CHANGE. ALOOF WHICH AIDS UP TO HAZARD

MANY A POOCH party or canine convention has been held, but never such a sophisticated, "doggy" affair as the picnic at Miss Katharine Lane's in "Manchester-by-the-Sea, Saturday.

The party, which was for members of the N. E. Dog Training Club and their pets, was virtually an afternoon tea for the aristocratic members of dogdom who have attended the finest finishing schools and know just how to act in polite society . . .

Though there were about 50 dogs, not a single fight, or even a growl, broke out during the afternoon . . .

It was a perfect day but the air was too cool for the owners to relish the water sports program originally planned for them . . . so the dogs were the only ones taking a dip in the ocean . . . They put on an exhibition of retrieving bones, etc., from the surf . . .

Miss Lane's week-end house guests, Mrs. Arthur Woods and Mr. F. Carrington Weems of New York, had a lot of fun and entered right into the spirit of the affair, which took place on the private beach adjoining Miss Lane's estate.

The dogs, which are so often stared at in shows, etc., had a chance to be spectators during one of the hilarious games . . in which the owners tested their agility at steeplechasing over the hurdles ordinarily used for the dogs' obedience exhibitions.

Miss Katharine Wellman, one of the leading lights in the club, was present with her German shepherd, which was chosen the "glamour" dog of the gathering and won first prize for the dog with the most personality . . . Miss Lane's little Schipperke won second prize in the personality contest . . .

Among the many picnickers were Mrs. William B. Long who drove up from Cohasset with her pet Corgi . . . Mrs. Warren Thayer of Lancaster, Dr. Ronald Weller, Mrs. J. R. Donlin and John Brownell .

MRS. E. CARLE SHOTWELL of Beverly Farms caught unawares by the photographer as she looked over her shoulder to chat with friends between courses of her picnic lunch at a recent North Shore fete. The Shotwells make their year round home in the shore colony.

McVeigh-Bransford Ceremony

THE MANY CONGRATULATORY messages which Charles S. McVeigh and his bride, Evelyn Bransforth, tore open at their wedding reception Saturday in Nashville, Tennessee, included many from Boston where Charley has loads of friends in the younger social crowd . . . He was a member of the class of 1938 at Harvard and on the usher list for many a big debutante ball during his years at college . . . He recently came to Boston to be a usher at John Graham's wedding to Barbara Putnam, and a year ago he was a member of John Roosevelt's wedding party . .

Charley and his bride will join the rapidly increasing colony of young marrieds at Charlottesville, Va., where the bridegroom will study law at the University of Virginia . . .Among their best boys will be his close friends, the Franklin Roosevelts, Jr., his classmate, Marshall Field, Jr., and the latter's wife who was Joanne Bass of Boston, and the newlywed George Baty Blakes (Rosemary Shaw) who will be among the newest additions to the colony . .

John Graham and his bride will probably settle down in Boston, but in the meantime they are seeing America first and Bermuda, too, on their honeymoon . . . After a month in Mt. Desert, Me., and Brookville, L. I., they sailed Saturday to spend the rest of the summer in Bermuda . . John's parents, Mr and Mrs. Kenneth Graham of Park avenue, gave them a bon voyage party at the Japanese Garden of the Ritz Carleton in New York, and among the guests was his debutante sister, Mary G. Graham. . .

Envelope of Any Letter Should Bear Woman's Formal Name, Mrs. Beeckman Advises Reader

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Will you kindly settle a difference of opinion regarding the following: A contends, when addressing an envelope to one's wife, one should use her given name, (Mrs. Mary Smith). B is of the opinion that her formal title should be used at all times (Mrs. John Jones).

2—When, if at any time, is it correct to use a married woman's given name on an envelope? T.

1—B is right. On the envelope of any letter . . . social or business . . . sent to a married woman, we should use the formal name: Mrs. John Jones. There should be no informality in the form of name used on an envelope.

2—There is only one circumstance which suggests that we probably must see a married woman's given name on an envelope. This is in the case of a business or professional woman who herself chooses to use her first name after the Mrs. in business.

CHAPTER ONE and Chapter Two of "The Runaway" appear in this edition. Chapter One is reprinted from the Boston Sunday Advertiser, in which it was published yesterday.

That a husband and father should be. He settled her problems, adored his children, paid his bills and thought "Mom" the most important and admirable person alive.

"Oh, Spencer!" Sarah Gibson had said. The Gibsons had come straight from a cramped flat in Brooklyn. Sarah had dreamed of hens in [illegible] and cowbays and chickens of her own to feed. They were all here [illegible]

She took naturally to farmyard and farm kitchen activities. On the 200 acres of the Gibson ranch, there was a little tenant house and when Spencer's qualifications proved to be clerical rather than agricultural, he had seized the chance to buy it at the Exchange and Sarah had capably established a good Swedish farmer and his [illegible] Mrs. Gibson was interested and pleased. "Well, for pity's sake," she said, "I think that's very much to Jo[illegible] credit. I never do. He's smart how. He [illegible] [illegible] but all the [illegible] and congratulate her. And he praises Karin does [illegible]

"Well, Mother, why wouldn't he with his father and grandfather right from wherever it was?" Dale answered.

"That ought to help him a lot with his law practice, Becky. If he's come to practice here that is," her mother added, looking up. "The [illegible]

"His father's giving him a [illegible] the ranch just as he did Gerry and Lucy when they married. Lucy and Rick Williams are going to build [illegible] And Joe gets the caravan [illegible] with the redwoods [illegible]

Well, the Feraltas are awfully nice people, Becky. They've been here from the beginning, and I don't know any citizen of Salletta [illegible] it's more respected than Gregorio Feralta. And a little money doesn't hurt, dear, when you're getting started."

"You don't sound very enthusiastic, mother."

"Well, I would be, Becky, if you were! But somehow I don't feel you're in love with Joe, for all he's so handsome and nice," Mrs. Gibson said, a little troubled. Rebecca was silent. It was Sarah who resumed the conversation. "And Joe wants you to marry him, does he? You seem so young, Becky."

A LOYAL LOVER

"He always has," Becky said simply. It was true. Big, dark, clever Joe Feralta had not looked at another girl since that night, now six years ago, when Rebecca had taken the part of "California" in the grammar school pageant. Her [illegible] of self-[illegible] standing out in a cloud under her good crown, her girl Becky, [illegible] sweeping the floor Becky had walked [illegible] into Great Joe's heart.

He always had wanted to marry me," she told her mother now simply. "And that would mean," Becky went on slowly, "living up on the Feralta place. May and Gerry'll have children, and Lucy and Rick'll have children, and I'll have children. Nice little children with dark curls, whose grandpa is one of the big vineyardists of the estate. Every Sunday we'll have a big two [illegible] dinner of [illegible] wine and macaroni—"

Well," her mother said mildly, as she paused, "there are better lives than that, Rick. You'd have to search the world over to find a lovelier place than Salletta."

Becky spoke reluctantly, thoughtfully. "You'd like me to, wouldn't you, Mother?"

Well, I don't think there's [illegible] than Joe," Sarah Gibson said hesitatingly. "There isn't a girl here who wouldn't jump at him. Certainly Alva Ridley [illegible]

Ha!" Becky ejaculated, and was still.

"But you just don't feel that you could love Joe?" Sarah ventured after a pause.

Becky put her tawny head down on the table for a moment, and her mother, troubled and surprised, imagined that she was crying. But when she raised her head her eyes were bright and dry.

Speaking with a sort of angry desperation that was yet quiet and controlled, she said, "I want to live my life, not Joe Feratta's life. I want to go to cities, and run around them in the cabs and see the lights of big opera houses and hotels, and work and worry, and fall in love and make mistakes and live—not vegetate! I want to do—dangerous things, in villas on the Mediterranean and hotels in London. What's the matter?"

Sarah's face had suddenly grown pale. "What is it, Mother?" Becky repeated, alarmed.

"Just . . . ." Sarah's voice had died on her throat; she spoke with difficulty. "Just that that's a silly way to talk, Becky," she said.

"Mother, why is it silly to want something better than Salletta?" the girl demanded passionately. "I could take care of myself. She looked away with narrowed eyes. "It isn't that. It's that there's nothing but disappointment and—and trouble for you out in the world. Here you have everything, everything. And if you married—I don't say Joe, but anyone, anyone someone you loved, of course—you might have as happy a life as any girl in the world! Think of the eastern climate, Becky, and the slums, and the poor little children in the slums—"

CHAPTER TWO

"I do," said Becky in the pause, "and I want to see it. I want to be one with people who live in slums. And I want to be rich, too, to go to those shops that advertise in the smart magazines and have a fur coat, and have some stunning man with tons of money—"

Sarah had risen to her feet and was speaking with colorless lips. "I don't want you ever to talk that way again, Becky. It's wicked. You don't know what you're talking about. You don't know what misery—what utter misery might be waiting for you out there, or how—how helpless you would be if once you got into it! For Heaven's sake—"

The last words were a prayer. Sarah, her back turned now as she carried her pans and bowls into the kitchen, said them half to herself. Becky sat at the table, staring bewildered after her.

What on earth was the matter? Dinner proceeded as usual and it was only after dinner that a phrase or two, seemingly meaningless at the time, as overheard by Becky as she straightened spice boxes and cereal jars in the big dim ranch-house pantry, occurred to her. Spin was outside in the dusky yard under the window feeding the dogs; Becky heard her mother speak to him:

"Spin, what made you ask that at dinner tonight?" Sarah's tone was sharp with anxiety.

"Ask what?" Spin's big rough voice asked in return.

"About where daddy got his money."

NO ANSWER

"I don't remember. Oh, yes!" Spin's tone was surprised. "Well I—gee, I don't know," he answered bewilderedly; "some of the fellers at school were talkin' about Salletts' real estate, and they asked what dad paid for this place. I said I didn't know. But I was rememberin' what you said about you and dad startin' on $20 a week."

"Becky didn't suggest it?" Sarah asked swiftly.

[illegible] in the pantry rattled some [illegible] drowning out further [illegible] Later, when she was in bed, the little episode came back to her and connected itself with her conversation with her mother. She had said she wanted to go away to live dangerously, independently, to [illegible] and beauty and love, and her mother had looked ready to faint. And afterward her mother had interrogated Spin as to an innocent question at dinner.

Well, what had Spin asked? His father had been suggesting to Andrew, the third son, that he content himself with the cheaper seats at the movies: he and his wife, Dad had said, hadn't had money for loge seats when they had married. Twenty dollars a week didn't leave any room for luxuries . . .

"But then how'd you ever come to here and buy this place?" Spin had asked. What had dad answered? Becky tried to think. Had he glanced swiftly and apprehensively at mother as he did so? She distinctly remembered that he had. Then dad had said:

"Oh, I had a streak of luck," and mother had said instantly, "Mrs. Bates came over today with Margie's baby."

And then later mother had asked Spin if Becky had put him up to asking that question. Why should Becky do anything of the sort? To want to go away for adventures, and the point of Dad's having somehow been able, on an income of a thousand a year, to buy a $7000 piece of property and improve it—what was the connection between them?

Well, what? It came out nowhere.

On a spring afternoon Rebecca went to the Exchange on an errand for her mother, to wander with her basket along the shelves, looking at her list—cinnamon, crackers, ice cream, salt, coffee. With everything going on in the world—girls signing movie contracts, girls and men meeting at restaurant tables in scintillating cities, women buying steamship tickets, riding on the tops of London omnibuses looking at pictures in the Louvre—she must be here in the Middle Valley Exchange at Sallelts.

Perhaps Gemma O'Donnell, Agnes' niece, would call to her from the collar counter: "Listen, Beck, Aunt Agnes has just got in some swell Easter models. One looks just like your blue linen. New York copies, you know."

Of course, of course. New York [illegible] was a New York copy. Rebecca Gibson Feratta would never see New York. Or, at 40, did she would be a stout woman of 40 with big children at home. New York would mean nothing to her then. She would [illegible] broad lights, crowded streets, hunting perhaps certainly shabby and [illegible] but thrilling to great possibilities. The joy [illegible] money, the new chance, the [illegible] of tomorrow and the day after tomorrow! These would not stir her blood then. No star would be complaining to Joe that none of the pretty dress models came in size 44.

All right, if that were one's fate. But it was dull. Joe would have as much of a career as Sallelts could afford. He would never go away because he shared with his father and mother a firm conviction that everyone who did not live in this rich valley below the California Sierras was unfortunate or a fool.

Joe was a smart lawyer; he might go in for politics sometime. District Attorney or State Senator. But, of course, it all came back to this: she did not love Joe. She left liking and admiration and confidence and a certain girlish pride in his passion. But she didn't love him.

Nevertheless, she was shyly [illegible] at the loyal and affectionate interest that both families felt when the great secret of her engagement to Joe was somehow made known a few weeks later. There was no announcement, yet in a hundred ways the little town gave a favorite son and daughter its hearty congratulations upon the suspected state of affairs.

On a certain Sunday Rebecca went with Joe to dinner at his father's house. She had been there before, but not often, not easily. There was an indefinable atmosphere of strain at the Feratta dinner table.

Becky talked, her cheeks crimsoning with nervous effort; she tried to eat what Mr. and Mrs. Feratta expected her to eat. But at two o'clock on a very hot spring afternoon the good [illegible] the roast [illegible], the onions and spaghetti and asparagus and biscuits and crab salad and chocolate layer cake constituted a pretty hearty meal.

HANDSOME STRANGER

"Papa likes a real good dinner, Sundays," Mrs. Feratta said mildly; "at supper we just have a p'ckup."

After dinner they sat uncomfortably for a time in the straw chairs and canvas hammocks of the square porch. When Mrs. Feratta excused herself and went inside, Rebecca and Joe walked up to the canyon and looked at the piece of property his father had promised him upon his marriage. A man came out of the woods and stood looking at them. "Hello. Any water round here?" he asked.

He was a stranger, handsome with a kind of [illegible] about him, with a [illegible] and [illegible] clothes. It was very hot now, not snowy at all, but Becky instantly knew that they were right; the faintly checked brown tweed suit, the brown sweater, the brown cap he lifted from brown hair.

"We've got a hot engine here," he said. "Fan belt broke." He jerked his head toward the ranch road that here came within a half mile of the canyon. "McSwayne said there was a pipe here," he added. Joe was instantly all interest.

"McSwayne came up to look at the vines?" he surmised. "He's from San Jose; he buys grapes from Pop every year," Joe explained in an aside to Rebecca. "You got stuck, hey? Sure there's a pipe here. But the best thing would be to run her down the grade on gravity to the garage. My [illegible] had [illegible] had tell you [illegible]

They walked down between the vines together and out onto the dirt road, and presently saw McSwayne, a fat, perspiring man who sat on the running board of the car and mopped his brow.

"My name's Flood," the strange man explained as they went. "Gavin Flood. That's a Scotch name, Gavin, but my people were Irish. You're certainly kind to bother."

"No bother," Joe said. "Pop'll certainly be glad to see Mr. McSwayne. How's it happen you come in the back way?"

"Driving down from [illegible] we've been a couple of days on the way," the other man explained. "McSwayne's mother lives up there and Ned had to go up anyway to see a man in Gotley about some alfalfa. He was sure he could find your place without going into Sallelts, and we did find it. But I guess we came in the wrong gate."

"His sister's living up here, isn't she?" Becky said, speaking for the first time. "I know her," she added Willy White."

"That's right," Gavin Flood said with a nod and a glance. "We're going to stay with her a few days while Ned scouts round here for olives and grapes and so on."

"San Jose man yourself?" Joe asked.

"No; Hollywood just now. Born in New York."

There had reached Ned McSwayne [illegible] They all got into the car, and on [illegible] slid down the grade to the garage. Buck Williams [illegible] again.

Just before they left, Gavin [illegible] had an opportunity for a few words alone with Becky. "You live in Sallelts, Miss Gibson?"

"I teach in the kindergarten. Yes; my people live there. [illegible] ranch is about three miles out of town."

"Any chance of seeing you—say, tomorrow?"

The warm clear tan of Rebecca's cheeks colored. There was no mistaking the look in Gavin Flood's eyes.

"I don't—believe so. And unexpectedly even to herself she added: "I'm engaged to Joe, you know, and we have so much to do."

"Oh?" Gavin said with a [illegible] for Joe. "That's it is it? That's Joe? Well, lucky Joe. And lucky me. I've fallen in love with you."

He said it regretfully, but with an air of casualness, of philosophic carelessness especially his own. Immediately he had left her side and joined the group; he was talking to Lucy. Lucy smiled up at him appreciatively. The woman did not live whose heart beat normally when Gavin turned the battery of his quiet, his [illegible] sophisticated charm upon her.

Becky moved in a dream of [illegible] for the rest of the day and [illegible] awake thinking about him at night. She did not want to do it, she felt it silly, reprehensible, disloyal. But there was no help for it. There he was in her thoughts, a dark-haired tall man in [illegible] with something in his eye, in his glance, in his manner. . .

To-morrow is going to mean a lot in Rebecca's life. Don't miss to-morrow's exciting chapter.

AUSTEN LAKE

Red Sox 'On Fire;' Everybody's Happy

DETROIT, JULY 17—IF YOU WISH to mantle Joe Cronin's cheek with a dull, indignant blush; if you like to see the collective nostrils off the Red Sox wreathed in wrinkles; if you want Tom Yawkey to make facial contortions like sniffling the aroma of stale haddock — just mention the little word "pennant."

AUSTEN LAKE

It' verboten.

It's like whistling in church.

It's like talking third term to Roosevelt.

Thus, immediately after the Red Sox won their Sabbath doubleheader, their dozenth straight, in traipsed a brash Detroit reporter and said in stentorian tones, "Well, looks like the pennant, huh?"

The effect was paralytic.

Roger Cramer stopped soaping his anatomy in the open shower. Joe Vosmik swallowed the top of a tonic bottle. Foxx stepped on his wrist watch. And the rest of the nude, pink and perspiring company froze like varying postures of the living Buddha.

"Pennant," shuddered Cronin, tasting the word like a spoiled clam, "what is that?"

"You know," persisted the vulgarian, "it's a triangular strip of cloth with 'league champions' sewed on. You fly it on your flagpole."

"Tripe," snorted Cronin, "pure poppycock. You've been smoking opium. There ain't no sech thing. And even if there was we don't want to hear about it—now."

That "now" was ominous. For, though the Red Sox from their cash papa, Thomas Austin Yawkey, down to their latest rookie, Chuck Sayles, undoubtedly dream pennant in the caverns of their souls, let no man utter the nauseous noun out loud not "now."

And yet, later during the evening lobby forum, Cronin chatted about something similar. He hoped, he said, that his club was "on fire — the kind of inspirational flame which imbues even the most mediocre members of a club to perform muscular marvels.

Detroit Fans Want Cochrane Back

WHAT A DIFFERENCE travelling with a winning Red Sox club is from what it used to be with the Yawkey Fauntleroys of recent years and the raggedy Red Sox of the Quinn regime.

Gone are the pickle pusses and surly glowers under the potted palms of their hotel foyers. Gone are the whispering cliques who gathered in Pullman corners. Gone are the clubhouse bickerings and locker jealousies.

Light and laughter have taken their places. The dull drudge of the summer season is fun.

Baseball is like that. A good consistent taste of success acts like a heart stimulant, and it looked yesterday as though the Red Sox had swallowed that kind of elixir. Cronin, who in times past has heard harsh words about his tendency to make croquet wickets of his legs, gathered skipping grounders like a housewife plucking carpet lint with the nozzle of a vacuum cleaner. Our Joseph was inspired. He handled ten chances in the first game and six in the second with a velvet smoothness which turned the habitual hoots of the Detroit burghers funny how the hinterlanders love to moo at our Joe—to ' the and aha of admiral ov

The Red Sox infield played the title role in Sunday's drama, with a professional flourish which made Detroit's stumble fingered fumblings resemble the fat men playing for a picnic supper. Detroit did everything with the ball but lose it in the slack of their bloomers, weird exhibition which set the wild echoes flying with barnyard blurts until it was hard to realize that this was a team of home heroes whose loyal following had rolled hallelujahs a few short years ago when Mickey Cochrane was leading them to twin pennants. Incidentally, there is a petition being circulated here for the reinstatement of Cochrane as manager.

But let no one imagine that Detroit's 12 errors decided the ball games. The Sox won both on merit. "Merit" has the sound of a knock compared with the job of pitching work which silvery haired Lefty Grove and big, amiable Denny Galehouse did. For neither had Cronin walking in circles, snatching at his heart or drolling with exasperation. Cronin just lolled back on deep shortstop grass and relaxed while Mose and Denny pooled them in, always keeping a little something extra in the shoes for the pinch.

INDEED, such is the newfound fellowship of the Red Sox that Grove, after finishing the opener, came out in his dungarees and short togs on the lip of the cave to send his hand and arm if Cronin wished him to shoot any of Galehouse's trouble. As it happened Denny shot all his own trouble so Mose just mooched around adding his ear [illegible] which sounded [illegible]

Watch Jimmy Foxx during the remaining nine games of this road trip. For Mr. Muscles is just beginning to recover the natural art of his swing and the flicking break of the thick wrists which make baseballs fly over the outfield screens. His homerun in the eighth inning of the first game was a sky-scraping arch which landed almost vertically in the left field wing and if its hump had been flattened out, would have had enough distance left over to make a triple and a couple of doubles. His sinus and intestinal ailment are gone now, and there is nothing but happy hunting for blocky Jeems ahead.

Ho hum. Today Detroit, tomorrow Chicago and then the furnace heat of St. Louis. By next Sunday night much of the 1939 Red Sox destiny will have been determined.

CRONIN DEFIES YANKS, SAYS SOX TO WIN FLAG

By JOE CASHMAN

DETROIT, July 17—The longest winning streak ever unreeled by a Boston American League club is just one game away from Joe Cronin's sensational second-placers today.

If the fantastic Fenway flock can make a sweep of the three-game series with Tigers to run its string of straight victories to 13 this p. m., it will have captured more consecutive triumphs than any of its predecessors since A. L. ball was introduced to New England in 1901.

UMPIRE BALLAFANT has his say in no uncertain terms to Coach Roy Johnson (center) and Manager Hartnett of Cubs. Upshot was that Pitcher Claude Passeau was eased from game. Passeau had protested he was safe at first. Johnson and Hartnett supported his claim. To no avail. Some year for the umps, eh?

In fact, not since the Boston Nationals of 1897 won 17 decisions in succession has any Hub entry won more than 12 straight.

In taking both ends of the Sabbath twin bill from the Bengals to extend their string to 12 in a row, the Back Bay boys equalled the best consecutive record in the Yawkey seven year regime, set by the '36 club—and also equalled the big league high in 1909 win streaks fashioned by the Yankees in the spring.

ALL ON ROAD, TOO

The most amazing part of the Sox current surge is that they've won these 12 games on the road and haven't dropped a verdict away from home in 14 starts.

The only American League entry ever to win more than a dozen games in a row on the trails was the Washington Club of 1912, which won 16.

The White Sox of 1906 hold the DETROIT, July 17.

"The h——l with the Yanks," bellowed Joe Cronin in answer to a reporter's query here today. "We're winning, aren't we" And we'll keep on winning until we reach the top. The Yanks are only human. They'll crack if we don't. And we won't."

A. L. straight victory record of 19, but no club has won more than 12 in a row since 1934.

The job of routing the traditional "13" jinx this afternoon is being entrusted to Woodrow Thomas Rich, the infant of the staff.

"Woody" has made but three brief bill appearances and hasn't worked three innings in all since he hurt his arm late in May.

Judging from the ball he pitched in protecting a one-run lead in the tenth inning at Cleveland last Thursday night he's ready [illegible] the prize mound "find" of the year that he was up to the time his wing went lame.

It's supposed to get tougher and tougher for a club to win each time it strives to add to a streak which had passed ten straight. But these rollicking Red Stockings appear to thrive under the strain.

If they are knocked off today you can set it down it will be because of the effectiveness of ex-Mate Louis "Buck" Newsom, who'll face them, and not because they've Boston, cradle of the American Revolution, is at it again, says the Associated Press.

Famed in song and story for its baked beans and tea party, this city now shelters two baseball clubs that are making revolutionary gestures.

For instance, the Bees swept through a doubleheader by 3-0 and 13 with the first place Reds yesterday.

The two triumphs made it 18 [illegible] the Boston [illegible] the only team to [illegible] against both the Reds in the National League.

GIANTS BEATEN

The Bees [illegible] Derringer, [illegible] for their 11th and 12th straight victories to stay just six games back of the Yanks in the American League. The scores were 7-2 and 3-0.

There were other noteworthy performances on the Sunday program of doubleheaders.

In New York Morton Cooper of the Cardinals stopped the Giants with eight hits to win 3-1 as Joe Medwick stole home with an important run.

Over in Brooklyn the Dodgers and Cubs traded third and fourth places twice. Chicago won the first game, 9-2. Then a nice relief job by Red Evans gave Brooklyn a 4-0 decision.

The Phillies and Pirates split a two-bill. Hugh Mulcahy pitched the Phils to a 3-2 opening victory for his fifth win of the year and then the Bucs won, 7-3.

YANKS FLASH

Stirred by news of the champions' recent defeats, the season's largest crowd—63,064—turned out at Cleveland to see the Yankees trim the Indians twice, 5-2 and 8-3.

Lefty Gomez and Marius Russo did some excellent mound work in holding the Tribe to a 13 hit total, the Yanks all fielded brilliantly and Tommy Henrich, a refugee from the Indians, poled out a triple, double and two singles.

Chicago's White Sox stayed in third place by downing the Senators, 3-2 and 6-3.

GIANTS BECOME WILD MEN OF N. L.

NEW YORK, July 17 (AP)—In place of the famous Gas House Gang, the National League this year presents the "Coogan's Bluff Mob," as hard bitten a bunch of baseball warriors as ever wore the livery of the Giants.

Warstler Replaces Miller as B's Push 1st Division Drive

With Eddie Miller done for the season as the result of a complete fracture of the fibula in his left leg, sad-faced Bees officials went on the search today for a shortstop while local fans expressed deep sympathy over the misfortunes which have befallen Manager Casey Stengel's spirited squadron.

Twin victory over the league-leading Reds and some 30,000 paid clients watching the triumphs ord narily would have made Sunday, July 16, one of the gayest days in Boston baseball history for the Sox and a [illegible] from the Tigers while the Jays were hosting the [illegible] from the top and [illegible] second place.

He said today it is possible the Bees [illegible] back from Toronto. He's the player the Bees picked up in the deal with Pittsburgh, which sent Ebbie Fletcher to Forbes Field.

Casey shook his head when Sebastian Sisti, spectacular young infielder playing at the Hartford farm, was mentioned. Stengel thinks he'd like to keep Sisti at Hartford for another spell.

The Bees' shortstop prospects end with Schuster and Sisti. After these, they have to look over the field.

Having lost the [illegible] 3-0 and 4-3, Bill McKechnie's pilots tried to [illegible] but [illegible] Whitlow today in an effort to save some of the pieces. Dean's Arm Cut; Hint Rules Rift

BROOKLYN, July 17 (INS)—Dizzy Dean, Chicago Cubs pitcher, suffered a cut on his left arm today. [illegible]

Dizzy Dean

[illegible] was lying on the bed, moaning a little, as his wife attempted to stanch the flow of blood.

A doctor was summoned and took two stitches in Dean's arm.

At Pittsburgh, where the Deans' team halted, Mrs. Dean said:

"Dizzy was asleep in bed when the phone rang. He stuck out his hand to reach for it and cut his arm on the glass top of the telephone stand."

A spokesman for the Commodore made answer:

"There is nothing in the room which could have been responsible for a cut of that kind. All the glass has rounded edges."

TAUNTON, July 17 Commanding Lady, with a few days' rest under her ribs, should redeem herself in the eyes of her supporters at the Taunton dog track tonight.

This one breaks from the three-hole in the ninth race and it is my idea of the safest wagering hazard on the fine card Jimmy Hodock has arranged.

Pets Play Men At Dilboy

A snappy game of basketball is in store at Dilboy field, Somerville, where the Boston Olympets face the men's Highet Club, under the auspices of the V. F. W. Dilboy Post, Somerville.

Charley "Skeet" Scriol, reputed to be the "fireball king" of softball twirlers, will captain his squad against the high stepping Pets, who won their last game by a 15 to 4 margin.

Softball followers believe the Pets play well enough to take the measure of the hard-hitting Highets.

Mr. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

BUDDY HASSETT of the Bees, who has been one of the sensations of the National League this season, was merely hoping to get into the regular lineup during the Spring training season . . . It looked as if Elbie Fletcher was going to land the first base job, while even Hassett questioned his own ability to play the outfield.

"I think Al Simmons is great in left field," Hassett said to me at Bradenton, Fla. . . . "I hope he lands the job, while I am going to do everything I can to become a regular in right field . . . I don't know much about playing right field, but I am going to do my best for Casey Stengel."

When Fletcher failed to make good at the bat, Stengel moved Hassett in to first base and he has been there since . . . Buddy's hitting has been brilliant . . . More important, he has been getting his hits in the pinches . . . Buddy is a great money ball player, and has given the Bees the extra batting punch they need.

Incidentally, it was Bob Quinn who engineered the deal that brought Hassett to Boston . . . Bob has proved one of the shrewdest traders in baseball . . . I am still trying to figure out how Quinn got Eddie Miller from Kansas City, a Yankee farm.

Roman Flag as Kentucky Derby Possibility

TAB ROMAN FLAG, winner of "The Mayflower Stakes" at Suffolk Downs, as a Kentucky Derby possibility . . . This two-year-old displayed amazing speed and courage in the dash through the stretch that enabled him to overtake and conquer Smart Bet . . . Dave Wilson picked Roman Flag to win . . . Wilson also gave his followers Powers Gouraud and Grand Duke.

They will drop the curtain on the 60-day Suffolk Downs meeting on Saturday . . . The daily mutuel handle has been running $20,000 behind a year ago, but with three extra days of racing this year it is expected that the East Boston track will equal last year's figures.

Russ Murray will be associated with Lou Smith at Rockingham Park . . . Russ declares most of the better racing stables will be quartered at Rockingham when the 18-day meeting opens on next Monday . . . The 1200 stalls at the track will not be able to handle all of the thoroughbreds whose owners are anxious to ship to the Salem, N. H., track.

Why not Billy Conn?

I believe Boston boxing would pick up if the promoters would bring Billy Conn of Pittsburgh here. Conn proved a great fighter as he won the world's light heavyweight title from Melio Bettina. Billy has a swell left hand, is a good boxer, and loves to fight. The public would like to see the "Fighting Irishman" in action here.

Remember the big gates Jim Maloney used to draw?

JAMES CASEY, South Boston.

Likes Cronin story

I liked Joe Cronin's life story that started in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and which was continued in the Daily Record. It is a fitting tribute to one ball player who hasn't got any fear of the Yanks. I think that under Cronin's leadership the Red Sox will go on to win the American League pennant. A CRONIN BOOSTER.

Simmons a hitter

As the season has progressed, it is once more apparent Al Simmons is one of the most natural hitters in baseball. Al carried quite a bit of excess weight at the start of the season, but has got rid of most of it and is banging the agate hard. One must admire the courage the veteran shows when at the bat in tight spots.

DONALD HURLEY, Brookline.

White runners best

Don't let anybody sell you the idea Indians are better runners than white men. Study your records, and you will find that when white men and Indians have clashed, the Redskins have usually bitten the dust. The Indian athlete does not stand prosperity as a rule and succumbs to the temptations of modern society.

TALBOT WATSON, Malden.

Random Shots at Target

THE LOSS OF Lou Gehrig will cost the Yanks at least half a dozen ball games between now and the close of the season . . . This may prove sufficient to enable the Red Sox to win . . . When in his prime, Gehrig was a long hitter, and broke up many games with home runs . . . A weak batter like Babe Dahlgren cannot be expected to fill the gap caused by the loss of Gehrig.

Baseball will profit by hundreds of thousands of dollars as a result of the Red Sox drive . . . American League baseball interest was at a low ebb when Joe Cronin started his smash at the Yanks . . . I agree with "A Cronin Booster" when he says that the life story of Joe Cronin, now appearing in the Daily Record and Boston Sunday Advertiser, is as well done as the Sox handling of the Yanks . . . I would suggest you read it.

CRONIN SAYS SOX TO OUTLAST YANKS

finally folded under the pressure.

At least, that's the only prediction possible after watching them in the Sunday doubleheader.

48,152 SEE GAMES

A crowd of 48,152, largest by 500 that they had played before anywhere this year, tried its hardest to disconcert them.

And they won both decisions easier than they had any of the previous ten, the while the Tigers fell completely to pieces to make eight errors in the opening game and four more in the nightcap.

The 39-year-old Robert Moses Grove had more stuff than he owned when 29 as he limited the Bengals to six hits for a 9 to 2 walkaway in the opener.

Until one was out in the last of the fifth and the Sox had a lead of five unearned runs, Ol' Mose didn't permit a hostile to reach first base.

GALEHOUSE SUPERB

But if Grove's hurling was superlative, the flinging of Denny Galehouse in the afterpiece was nothing short of stupendous.

With the slightest slip threatening to spell disaster, what with his mates being limited to three blows by paul "Dizzy" Trout, Denny came through with a four-hit effort to prevail, 3 to 0, for the Sox third shutout win of the campaign and their 14th victory in the last 15 games.

All the inspired Hose needed to capture this melee was one hit. Bobby Doerr doubled in the fourth and moved in on an infield out and sacrifice fly by Foxx. This was the only bingle permitted by Trout until two singles along with four errors gave our heroes two more runs in the eighth.

With blinding speed and a cracking curve, Galehouse saw to it that he required no more than a solitary tally to triumph.

Only twice was he in the least danger.

KNEW HE HAD IT

A bad throw by Doerr, only Boston miscue of the afternoon, and a single by Averill put Bengals on third and first with one gone in the fifth. Doerr then made a great stop of a Gehringer grounder and Cronin a greater throw to complete a spine-tingling double play.

Roy Cullenbine tripled with a two gone in the seventh but Tebbetts was easy for Doerr.

Thus Galehouse, who until he went the route to turn back the Yanks 3 to 2 a week ago Saturday hadn't lasted more than 6 1-3 innings in any game for the Sox, gained his fourth verdict.

The big, handsome ex-Indian right-hander has become a revelation to everybody but Manager Cronin.

It was against the advice of his board of strategy and his scouts that he traded Ben Chapman to the Indians for Galehouse.

And, if he had listened to his aides and the managers and players of other clubs he'd have tied the can to Denny earlier in the race.

Incidentally, we want to apologize publicly to Mr. Cronin today. A few weeks ago we nominated Frankie Crosetti of the Yanks as short-stop for the All-Star game. We still hold that the little bomber deserved the vote at that time.

CRONIN THE BEST

But today we wouldn't take six like Crosetti for Joseph Edward Cronin.

For the past two weeks the Sox pilot has been the greatest ball player we've ever gazed upon, and that goes for Cobb, Wagner, Collins and the rest of the Hall of Fame immortals.

Hitting, fielding, driving, fighting, he's been a one-man ball club.

His Frank Merriwell performance against the Yanks had nothing on his play in Cleveland and out at Br—s Stadium here yesterday.

He played practically the whole infield and he was credited with handling 12 chances without an error against the Indians on Saturday.

In both Sunday struggles he played not only three infield positions but half the outfield as well as he accepted 17 chances without a bobble.

He made stops back of second and back of third and back of the box. He caught flies in left and in center. He made perfect throws off his thostops and off his ear. You never saw anything like it.

And did he holler in the clubhouse when somebody remarked that the twin win left the Sox still six games behind the top because the Yanks knocked off the Indians twice.

"Unbeatable" is the perfect one-word description of the current Cronin.

JOE CRONIN

THE LIFE OF JOE CRONIN

The story of the famous fighting Irishman, manager of the Red Sox, born during the San Francisco earthquake and who recently shook the sports world with his triumph over the Yanks.

NOW IN THE DAILY RECORD

ADAMS, JOBLESS, WEIGHS PRO GOLF

Although he will not celebrate his 19th birthday until next February, Teddy Adams, who became the 35th Massachusetts amateur champion by defeating Ray Marad at Tedesco, has been the most promising junior golfer in the state for four years.

Adams has the ability, physique, temperament and personality to develop into another Francis Ouimet.

But just how long he'll be able to remain in the amateur ranks depends upon whether or not he is able to obtain a paying position.

After he had captured the state caddy crown in 1937, any number of well wishers volunteered to lend a helping hand to the 16-year-old Wollaston caddy. But their hysteria was short lived.

Teddy's best offer was a position in the drying room of a Brockton factory, which manufactured cloth for women's suits.

The Adams live on Squantum street, opposite the Wollaston Golf Club. To reach his job in Brockton, Teddy was obliged to climb out of bed at 5 a. m., walk to the East Milton station, take a bus to Randolph avenue, where a pal picked him up in a car and transported him to the factory. His hours were from 7 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. and the salary was $14.50 per week.

Teddy didn't object to the early rising hour, the long trips to and from Brockton, the hours or the compensation, but after he had lost twenty pounds working nine hours daily in a drying room, which was filled with steam, for two months, his knees went back on him, and he was obliged to quit in order to preserve his health.

The 18-year-old state amateur champion is one of nine children. He loves to play golf but he's very anxious to get some type of employment which will enable him to do his bit toward caring for the younger Adamses.

He is slow and listless acting on a golf course but when he has work to do, he has never failed to give the best that's in him.

Teddy has plenty of gray matter. In fact, he's an unusually long headed kid. He proved that when he won the state amateur title at the tender age of 18. He has a keen sense of humor and is never at a loss for an answer. He has a most engaging personality and, unlike some golfers, his game is an asset and not a liability.

Shortly after he captured the state caddy title two years ago, Teddy was approached to turn professional. He was wise enough to refuse. In all probability, he'll again be approached by the same person with the same proposition.

Unless he is convinced that he has a business future, other than professional golf, Adams may be forced to step out of the amateur ranks, which would be a serious blow to golf in this section and possibly nationally.

Joe & Asbestos

By KEN KLING

Asbestos spots one today at Suffolk, and slips $5 across the board on Yellow 14-10-2. Saturday's bet, Bucket Head, won, boosting the roll to $27.

Dizzy Dame, "Dynamite" Kerr's consistent selling plater, looks out at Rockingham Park on her arrival from Delaware Park, where she was in the money in each of her five starts. Like so many thoroughbreds, she has a pet, whose name is Mitzi. Dizzy Dame is expected to win her share of races at the 18-day summer meeting which opens at Rockingham Park next Monday.

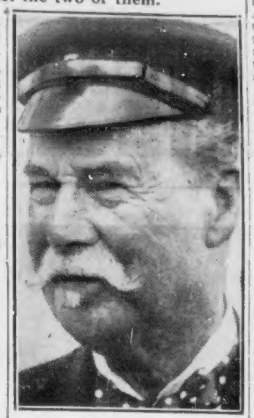
Sir Thomas Lipton Reviews Hobo Days With Jack Dempsey

By JACK DEMPSEY
(As Told to W. B. Seabrook.)

Jack Dempsey was a great admirer of Sir Thomas Lipton. Several times, in New York, London and Montreal, the champion and the titled yachtsman dined together, or lunched together, usually just the two of them.

I had a curiosity to know what they talked about, but each time I brought it up Dempsey's answers were colorless and non-committal, what he himself calls "the old bunk." Sir Thomas was a fine gentleman and a great sportsman and a good friend of America.



SIR THOMAS LIPTON

RAZZ GETS A RISE

Then one day I "razzed" the truth out of Jack. I said:

"Well, after all, it must have been pretty dull for both of you—hard for you to find much in common with a titled English society man."

This piqued Mr. Dempsey, and he opened up wide:

"Is that so, kid? We had aplenty in common, as you call it. Two guys that have both slept on park benches, and sat on coal heaps on winter nights in New York, and that have rode the rods out West, and hoboed it and hopped freight trains and pitched hay and topped beets and bummed it like tramps all over the old U. S. A., have got plenty to talk about when they sit down for dinner together at the Ritz.

"Sure. Maybe you didn't know it but Sir Thomas Lipton rode the rods before he ever rode in yachts. He did all that, and we had a grand time talking about it and swapping stories. He told me things about himself that I guess he has never told anybody.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER

"His daddy was a grocer over in Scotland and I guess they were pretty poor. Anyway, he beat it over to America in the steerage, without any money, and it's not just a way of speaking, but the exact truth that he slept on the benches in Union Square, and hoboed it all over the Middle West."

"Well, we talked mostly about those old days. You see, when a guy has done the hobo stuff, it's tough at times, but fun to talk about afterwards. There are a lot of tricks in it, and you've got to learn them, and there's a lot of danger and excitement in it.

"The easiest way is to get inside a box-car, but you can't always do that, and sometimes when you do, you get locked up and shunted off somewhere, and your food and water gives out, and anything can happen to you.

ROUGH RIDING!

"You can just lie there and starve or freeze to death, or some times you can break out if you can get hold of a piece of iron or timber heavy enough to smash with—or if you start kicking and hammering and yelling, and somebody lets you out, you spend the next thirty days in jail.

"The other way is to climb underneath the train, either when its standing still or moving slowly, and swing yourself up on the brake-beam. The noise and bang and dirt and cinders are bad, but you're safe enough unless some 'shack' gets wise and goes after you. They're a hard bunch, those freight men.

"They don't come and throw you off. They wait until the train gets rolling fast, and then they take an iron coupling pin on a long piece of bailing wire and let it down so that it drags under the train and begins to jump up and down like a flail. When it hits you you're knocked under the wheels and ground to pieces.

"Many an unlucky hobo has been killed that way out West. One night, on the Denver & Rio Grande, I nearly got mine. It's awful when they get after you with that thing, because you're helpless.

"You can't jump; you just crouch and dodge, and there isn't room to dodge much. And they pull the wire this way and the other, like a fishing line, and draw it in and let it out, feeling for you.

"That never happened to Sir Thomas Lipton, and he told me that if he knew they ever did that he guessed he'd have walked instead. But if the wire had not broke, the night I'm telling you about, they'd have got me for good and all.

In tomorrow's Boston Evening American, Dempsey tells of his bout with Jess Willard.

LONGWOOD BOWL PLAY UNDERWAY

Tennis of the highest class and variety was on tap today at the spacious Longwood Cricket Club, Chestnut Hill, where the 47th annual Longwood Bowl singles tournament was scheduled to get underway at 2 p. m.

The two top-seeded players in the men's side of the ledger, Australia's Adrian Quist and Uncle Sam's Gene Mako, were not scheduled today, having received special permission from the Bowl committee to have their initial matches set aside for a day.

However, the other headline performers, Gilbert A. Hunt (2), Gardner Mulloy (3), William Murphy (4), Chester Murphy (5), David G. Freeman (6), William Talbert (7) and Johnny Doeg (8) were all on deck for today's competition.

Frankie Parker, a talented and clever singles player, informed the committee at the last moment that he would participate in the doubles only. He evidently is still tired after his fine play in the Spring Lake tourney of last week.

Mulloy, a powerful Southern player, whipped Gene Mako in last week's session at Spring Lake; and David Freeman, the 18-year-old Californian, is rated the No. 1 junior performer in the country.

New England's nearest bet to make any kind of a showing before a home crowd is Paul Goulbord, present New England champion and a former all-around athlete at Dartmouth.

Congratulations Due Tedesco | Second Wood To Enter Colgate

By BILL GRIMES

It's fortunate for the Bees that they have as capable a replacement for Eddie Miller as Rabbit Warstler. "Rab's" arm has come back this year, and he's playing better ball than when the Bees were battling for the first division last season.

Umpire Magerkurth must have provoked Billy Jurges to be suspended and fined by Pres. Ford Frick. Whatever the "Major" did probably saved Jurges from being suspended indefinitely. One doesn't get away with taking punches at umpires today in organized baseball. But Ford Frick should take some of the blame for assigning that trio (Magerkurth, Italian-fant and Sears) to handle a National League game . . .

The Tedesco Country Club is to be congratulated upon its remarkable state championship. Judge Ralph W. Reeve, chairman of the tournament, didn't overlook a single detail. Alex Ellis, the pro-greenskeeper, turned over a perfect layout to the contenders for the state amateur crown. Sam Breed, chairman of the house committee, saw to it that everything clicked in his department as did Frank Huntress, chairman of the grounds committee. And more people witnessed the 35th Massachusetts amateur championship than ever saw any of the previous classics . . .

"Bee" McKechnie, daughter of the Cincinnati manager, is making the trip with the Reds . . "Bee" planned to visit Lake Boon today, go to Brooklyn for the night game and then on to Philadelphia . . .

The scribes laughed when Bob Quinn traded Joe Stripp for Freddie Frankhouse. But where's Stripp today? Frankhouse is proving an asset to the Bees. He has been able to get opponents out, which is more than some of the so-called "stars" have been able to do . . . Lloyd "Whitey" Moore put on an act in the Reds' dressing room after losing the second game that one would look for only from a southpaw. Ernie Lombardi slowed him up by suggesting that he (Moore) wait until he returned to Cincinnati and then hire a jumping room on the top floor of the Netherlands-Plaza.

Police Commissioner Joseph P. Timilty gets a great kick out of Charles Francis Adams, the youngest of Teddy Adams' brothers. After playing Wollaston Saturday morning, the commissioner piled Charles Francis into his car with Dan and Austie O'Connor, Eddie Gallagher and Arthur "Jocko" Conlon, and headed for Tedesco to watch the p. m. round of the state amateur finals. The intown traffic is always cleared when the "P. C." hoves in sight. Young Charlie had never seen such courteous traffic policemen. It was a great day for the kid until after the dinner at Charlie Warmuth's when the "P. C." jokingly, handed him the check . . .

Bobby Wood, youngest son of "Smoky" Joe, the old Red Sox speed king who is now coaching Yale, will enter Colgate in September. The second oldest Wood boy, Steve, was a freshman at Colgate last year. Joe Wood, Jr., was the only member of the Wood family to pass the college boards at Yale. Like Joe Sr., Steve is a pitcher. Bobby is a first baseman and, according to his illustrious father, the best ball player in the family.

Ray Marad did more for public links golf last week at Tedesco than any other "munie" player has ever before accomplished.
